

LEADERSHIP MANAGEMENT AND DEFENCE STUDIES (LMDS) PROGRAMME

The LMDS programme allows soldiers to have their career learning recognised through external accreditation with third level education. The Programme has a broad base of skills which are applicable to the DF and other disciplines outside the military. The Programme's origins can be traced to the White Paper 2000.

What?

"All personnel will be provided with the opportunity for personal development and associated professional experience in order to realise their full potential during their service in the Defence Forces."

Why?

"...to ensure...that members of the Permanent Defence Forces have qualifications which will enhance their job prospects on leaving the Defence Forces."

The DF pay the associated costs for the programme. Civilian students can pay €, per annum for a similar Programme in third level education.

ECTS (European Credit Transfer System) Credits are associated with completion of DF courses. The accumulation of 120 credits through the Programme on completion of the Potential NCO Course or equivalent, leads to the first award at Level 6 (see Chart 1). The completion of further career courses and accumulation of 150 and later 180 credits are associated to awards at Level 7 (see Chart 2).

3* soldiers are automatically included in the Programme. To ensure progression a 3* soldier must accumulate 20 Credits from Corps Courses and 40 Credits from the Work Based Learning Portfolio, prior to reporting on a Potential NCO's Course. Without these credits they will not achieve the 120 credits needed for conferral after completing the Potential NCO Course.

A list of Corps Courses and their associated credits is attached. Each year more courses are linked to the Programme. Check that you are using the most up to date list.

The Work Based Learning Portfolio is a document completed by the individual Soldier. It records routine activities that are completed in the course of normal military service. These include Training, Ceremonial and Overseas. On completion of 6 tasks a reflective log is written to demonstrate that the soldier has developed and learned through experiential learning or learning on the job. WBLP Focal Points have been briefed and are available in each unit to guide in the completion of WBLP's. The WBLP has 40 credits associated with it. 5 Credits equate to approximately 100 hours of study in higher education. The benefit of the WBLP is that it recognises time spent on the job, which otherwise would require up to 800 hours of course time.
